Judge acquits Chicago cop in fatal shooting

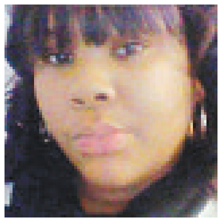
By Steve Schmadeke and Jeremy Gorner | CHICAGO TRIBUNE

In a stunning, abrupt end to the first trial in years of a Chicago police officer for a fatal off-duty shooting, a Cook County judge acquitted the veteran cop Monday on a legal fine point, drawing outrage from the black victim's family and leaders in the African-American community.

Judge Dennis Porter ruled that prosecutors failed to prove that Dante Servin acted recklessly, saying that Illinois courts have consistently held that anytime an individual points a gun at an intended victim and shoots, it is an intentional act, not a reckless one. He all but said prosecutors should have charged Servin with murder, not involuntary manslaughter.

Servin cannot be retried on a murder charge because of double-jeopardy protections, according to his attorney, Darren O'Brien.

A chaotic scene erupted in the courtroom after the brother of the victim, Rekia Boyd, reacted to Servin's acquittal by standing and taking a few steps toward Servin, angrily shouting, "This [bleep] killed my sister." Family, supporters and sheriff's deputies quickly pulled Martinez Sutton from the courtroom amid shouts and cries over the ruling.



Boyd

Later, as Servin walked from the Leighton Criminal Court Building with about a dozen off-duty Chicago cops flanking him, a crowd of about 40 exploded in anger, following him while yelling "[bleeping] murderer" and "shame on you." Someone hurled what appeared to be a lunch bag at the officer as he walked toward a parking garage.

"He gets to walk out, he gets to go to his happy life—that's a slap in the face," Sutton, 32, said moments later as tears streamed down his face. "That's just telling me the police can just kill you, go through this little process, take a two- or three-year vacation and then get back on the force like nothing happened."

The trial marked a rare criminal prosecution of a Chicago police officer for a fatal shooting, the first trial in nearly two decades. The race of Boyd and the officer—he is white—never became an issue in the trial itself, but it still hung over the proceedings, coming amid a national outcry in recent months over the deaths of unarmed African-Americans at the hands of white police officers in Ferguson, Mo., New York City, Cleveland and elsewhere.

PROTESTS

A few dozen people gathered Monday night to protest at the corner of 15th Street and Albany Avenue, not far from the site of the shooting.

Some of the protesters marched through West Side streets chanting "Justice for Rekia!" before stopping for a 60-second moment of silence near the area where she was killed.

Four police SUVs and about a half-dozen bike cops loosely followed but blocked off Douglas Boulevard and Kedzie Avenue when protesters stopped briefly.

By 8:20 p.m., the group swelled to about 30 protesters who were making their way west down Roosevelt Road, blocking the middle.

The head of the Illinois NAACP said Servin's acquittal will only exacerbate the contentious relationship between police and the African-American community.

"This statement—'I was afraid for my life'—it's got to stop," George Mitchell said of the common justification by police, including Servin, involved in shootings. "It's got to stop now because otherwise what's going to end up happening is that police and the community are going to be at odds completely with each other. And there's no reason for that."

Cook County State's Attorney Anita Alvarez issued a statement defending her decision to charge Servin with involuntary manslaughter, saying she was "extremely disappointed" with the judge's decision.

"The state's attorney's office brought charges in this case in good faith and only after a very careful legal analysis of the evidence as well as the specific circumstances of this crime," she said.

In charging Servin with involuntary manslaughter, prosecutors had alleged he acted recklessly in March 2012 when he fired five shots over his shoulder from inside his car in the direction of four people who had their backs to him in a dark West Side alley.

Servin's attorneys said he was in fear for his life after Antonio Cross, one of the four, pulled an object from his waistband, pointed it at Servin and ran toward his car. But police found only a cellphone.

Boyd, 22, was fatally shot in the back of the head, while other rounds grazed Cross' hand and hit a signpost.

The best hacks I've learned covering CTA

GOING PUBLIC
Tracy Swartz
» tswartz@redeyechicago.com
» @tracyswartz

It is the end of the line for this CTA columnist.

Friday was my last day at RedEye because I am now an entertainment reporter for the Tribune.

In my six years covering the CTA for RedEye, I've gotten hundreds of phone calls, tweets, emails and letters from you with complaints (and some compliments) about CTA service. The complaints that inspired the most ire and emails IN ALL CAPITAL LETTERS stemmed from the rocky transition to the Ventra fare payment system in 2013.

Because I've taken every bus line from start to finish and visited every rail station, I've amassed a few tips on how to have a smoother experience. Here are my best CTA hacks.

MULTIPLE ROUTES

Have a plan in place to get to work in case something happens along your regular bus and/or train route that's causing major delays. If you take a train, know the nearby bus routes and vice versa. Figure out if there are Divvy stations nearby. Chances are if you are searching for an alternate ride, other riders are too, so there may not be any taxis to take and ride-hailing cars may be too expensive because of surge pricing.

CHECK VENTRA STATEMENTS

Every so often, go to ventrachicago.com and check the list of rides you've recently taken to make sure that your credit card was not accidentally charged for a ride or you have a negative balance. If you have a Ventra dispute, the best option is to go to the Ventra office at 165 N. Jefferson St. and talk to a customer service rep.

Also remember to take your Ventra card out of your wallet to tap on the bus or train. Readers can pick up credit cards in your wallet so Ventra may not charge the correct card.

SPEAK UP

If you spot criminal activity on a train, use the call button to alert the operator, or if you're on a bus, go directly to the driver. If something happens at a CTA station, go to the customer service assistant or find the buttons on the platforms to call for help.

If you've already left the CTA and realized that you should have said something, there's still time to alert the agency. Go to transitchicago.com/contact to email the CTA.

LOST ITEMS

If you've lost something, go to transitchicago.com/riding_cta/lostandfound.aspx and find the phone number that corresponds to the train or bus line where you lost the item. Items are stored for two weeks.

YOU CAN'T WILL A BUS OR TRAIN TO MOVE FASTER

It doesn't help to berate the bus driver to go faster or yell in the train car that service is too slow.

If you think you're going to get in trouble for being late, go to a rail station customer assistant and ask for a CTA late slip.

PREP WORK FOR NFL'S BIG PRESEASON PICKING PARTY SET TO TOUCH DOWN IN CHICAGO

By Kristin Samuelson | REDEYE

Even if you don't like football, the NFL or sports in general, don't totally ignore this year's NFL draft because, at the very least, it will take over a large part of Chicago and could impact your daily commute or activities. Between April 30 and May 2, Grant Park and its surrounding areas will welcome 26 top NFL player prospects and thousands of spectators into "Draft Town," which will be the size of 15 football fields and hold large structures to accommodate hordes of people. Construction is set to begin Tuesday and seeing that league officials have called Draft Town a "three-ring circus," we figured we should give you as much information as possible about what this entails. Here's a guide to what is going where and the expected road closures beginning Tuesday.

1. Selection Square: Located under a temporary arch-shaped structure, this area will feature tables where representatives from all 32 teams will submit player selections
2. Tavern: Food and beverage area
4. Super Bowl museum: Area featuring historic Bears memorabilia
5. Buckingham Fountain: Will light up with team colors as each team picks
6. Team tents: Each team will have a tent where visitors can see memorabilia and browse information
7. Combine area: Fans can take part in some of the same speed and strength tests that prospective NFL players take part in at the NFL combine, including the 40-yard dash and vertical jump. The dash features a huge screen that shows NFL stars running so fans can race along. CHICAGO TRIBUNE GRAPHICS

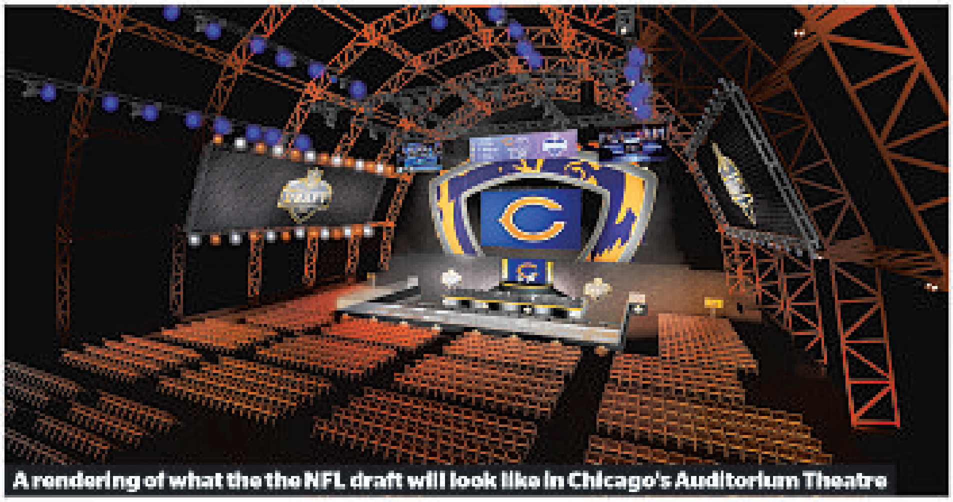
THE DRAFT IS BACK—AND IT'S A WHOLE LOT BIGGER THAN IN THE '60S

By Fred Mitchell | CHICAGO TRIBUNE



A rendering of what the the NFL draft will look like in Chicago's Auditorium Theatre

Chicago is on the clock.

With the NFL draft a little more than a week away, the league and city are embarking on ambitious plans to entertain thousands of fans and showcase the league throughout the week with free activities in and around Grant Park. And that's not to mention as many as 55 million TV viewers for the three-day draft.

The event also will attract 26 top prospects who are expected to be selected during the first two days of the draft, which runs April 30-May 2.

The draft will take place at the Auditorium Theatre, which is undergoing a transformation as separate platforms on either side of the stage are being prepared for ESPN and the NFL Network.

In addition, several structures will be built in Grant Park, contributing to what league officials have called a "three-ring circus."

Construction is set to begin this week on Draft Town, which will be the size of 15 football fields.

An arched structure will be built on Congress Plaza to house Selection Square, where team tables will be and from where teams will call in their picks.

"That is really where the operations of the draft take place," said Peter O'Reilly, NFL senior vice president of events. "That's where we will have about a thousand additional fans, beyond those who are in the theater."

Beyond a bridge will be another arched structure where ESPN and the NFL Network will be set up.

Fans will have the opportunity to get their picture taken with the Vince Lombardi Super Bowl Trophy in a Super Bowl museum. All the Super Bowl rings will be on display, as well as significant Bears memorabilia.

From food created by chef Graham Elliot to free football clinics and community initiatives, Chicago fans figure to be preoccupied with more than the Bears' No. 7 overall pick in the first round.

O'Reilly said with the draft moving out of New York after 51 years, it gave the NFL "the opportunity to re-imagine what the draft is."

"Not just an in-theater experience, but a massive free fan festival that allows so many more fans to experience the draft," he said. "This is a special move and something we couldn't be more excited about."

Don Welsh, President and CEO of Choose Chicago, the local tourism agency, spoke of the collaborative effort to bring the draft to Chicago by Mayor Emanuel and the Bears.

"When you think about people who helped make this happen ... it was a total team effort," Welsh said.

Hall of Fame linebacker Dick Butkus will announce one of the Bears' picks as more than 50 NFL greats will participate in the week's activities.

BULLS TRYING BEST TO BULLY THE BUCKS

By Chris Sosa | REDEYE

You can't blame Milwaukee if it has a big brother complex when it comes to Chicago.

The Bucks haven't had success anywhere close to what the Bulls have had in the past 30 years. Then there's Jason Kidd, who looks too young to be an NBA coach. He doesn't even wear a tie!

Milwaukee tried to change that Monday in Game 2 of their playoff series. No dice. Behind Jimmy Butler's 31 points, Derrick Rose's nine assists and Pau Gasol's double-double (11 points, 16 rebounds), the Bulls took a 2-0 series lead.

Maybe someday they'll be a full-grown adult, but for now they're more like a teenager in their hoops maturity. Here's what we learned from the game in those terms.

CHSOSA@REDEYECHICAGO.COM

Jimmy Butler's acrobatics

He sank the first basket of the game on an off-balance jumper from the baseline after being fouled by Michael Carter-Williams. Does it look pretty? Hell no, but the result certainly is.

MATURITY LEVEL

Reaching Jordan-esque levels (pre-first retirement)

Joakim Noah's passing

Normally the Bulls center's as good as it gets for a big man. He had his moments Monday, though there were a handful he'd like to have back.

MATURITY LEVEL

Like green banana. Not gonna kill you, but you've seen better.

Pau Gasol's spin move

The 7-footer busted out his Patrick Kane impression in the first quarter, only to miss the jumper. Still, it's nice to see it's still in his repertoire.

MATURITY LEVEL

George Clooney-esque. Past its prime, but can still dominate.

Nikola Mirotic's pump fakes

You don't see too many 6-10 players who send defenders flying like those dinosaurs in the new "Jurassic World" trailer. Yet Mirotic does it virtually every time he touches the ball.

MATURITY LEVEL

Like a fine scotch. Smooth an extra satisfying.

Butler's defense

He leaped in the air way too early as the Bucks' Khris Middleton gave him a fake, and Butler still blocked the shot on the way down. THEN he converted the layup on the other end.

MATURITY LEVEL

Like an iPhone. Already great, though you figure it will be even better soon.

THE MOUTHWATCH

"ANOTHER SOLID GAME. REALLY PATIENT IN THE NET. HE HANDLED THE PUCK WELL AND GUYS PLAYED IN FRONT OF HIM AS WELL."

—Blackhawks coach Joel Quenneville, on Scott Darling, who will start in goal for Game 4 against Nasvhille

"HE'S HAD A TON OF EXPERIENCE AT THIS LEVEL AND I'VE HAD VERY LIMITED SO I CAN'T THANK HIM ENOUGH FOR THE LIFE LESSONS AND GOALIE LESSONS HE SHARED WITH ME."

—Darling, on teammate and fellow goaltender Corey Crawford, whose spot he's taking

"I'M TRYING TO WORK HARD. THE ONLY THING I CAN DO NOW IS BE READY IN CASE I HAVE TO GO BACK IN. OTHER THAN THAT, ENCOURAGE THE GUYS, STAY POSITIVE AND MAKE SURE BODY LANGUAGE IS GOOD AND EVERYTHING IS POSITIVE AROUND HERE."

—Crawford, on how he's handling his role on the bench

TODAY IN THE YEAR ...

1836: With the battle cry of "Remember the Alamo," Texans led by Gen. Sam Houston defeated a Mexican army at San Jacinto, assuring Texas' independence.

1940: The quiz show that asked the "$64 question," "Take It or Leave It," premiered on CBS Radio.

1998: Astronomers announced in Washington they had discovered possible signs of a new family of planets orbiting a star 220 light-years away, the clearest evidence to date of worlds forming beyond our solar system.

Got movies?

Evander Holyfield, Larry King, Tony Hawk and Reba McEntire are just a few of the famous faces who'll be gracing ticket site Fandango's latest movie-centric campaign. The "We Love Movies" promotion will feature notable names from movies, sports and television waxing poetic about their favorite flicks and movie theater moments, Variety reports. Among the featured favs? "Finding Nemo," "Purple Rain," "Rocky" and "The Sound of Music." We suspect that last one is Holyfield's. He just loves the gazebo scene.

That's how old you need to be to have a shot at getting picked for Meryl Streep's just-announced screenwriters lab for women, Variety reports. The Writers Lab, which was announced during a panel Sunday at the Tribeca Film Festival, will be a screenplay development program aimed at expanding opportunities for women writers older than 40, with mentors including producer Caroline Kaplan ("Boyhood") and writer Kirsten Smith ("Legally Blonde"). The lab got "significant" funding from Streep and will be accepting submissions starting May 1 through June 1.

Who needs lost and found when you've got 7 million Twitter followers? Channing Tatum apparently wielded his Sexiest Man Alive powers over the weekend, eonline.com reports, when the "Magic Mike" star tweeted that he'd left his backpack in a New York City cab and pleaded for his fans' assistance in locating it. Sure enough, Tatum had his bag back by Sunday evening. "To everyone who tried to help and to the good New York Samaritan who found my bag and asked for nothing in return, thank you. Thank you all!" he posted. Anything for you, Channing.

THE QUOTE

"When you're in a van, and you fart, own up. It'll cause hell if you don't own up because everyone will blame everyone else. Make a pact that you'll own up to it. We did and that's why we did so well."

—Beatles drummer Ringo Starr, offering some crucial advice during his Rock 'n' Roll Hall of Fame acceptance speech Saturday night, Rolling Stone reports. Starr, who was inducted in the 30th annual ceremony by bandmate Paul McCartney, was honored alongside Bill Withers, Joan Jett & the Blackhearts, Stevie Ray Vaughan & Double Trouble, the Paul Butterfield Blues Band, Green Day, Lou Reed and the "5" Royales.

THE QUOTE

"For many years, I was her constant companion, and I witnessed a young girl with very few friends become a young woman with many, learning to stand up for herself and the things she believes in. Being brave enough to explore her musical curiosity, having a voice against those who hate and giving of herself to those in need."

—Andrea Swift, on daughter Taylor, at Sunday night's American Country Music Awards ceremony, Buzzfeed reports. The proud mom, who, her daughter recently revealed, is fighting cancer, gave the sweet speech as her daughter received the event's Milestone Award. Awwwwww, Mommmm.
